Save a Dog from Heatstroke—Here's How

By Susan Chaney

Posted in: Canine Health, What's Happening | July 12, 2012 at 5:57 AM

Let's be honest. It's happened to many of us. We misjudge. We're misinformed. We get delayed. Then we return to our vehicle and find one of our dogs in distress.

We all know how dangerous it is for dogs to be in cars and vans and trucks in warm weather. We've been warned and reminded and scared by friends' experiences.

Yet, it still happens. We are human after all. We do make mistakes.

So, when it does happen, what do you do?

Dogs can get overheated, often resulting in heatstroke, in a number of different situations, not just when left in cars. © Can Stock Photo Inc./thesupe87

Many years ago, I had my close call with a Yorkshire Terrier that my husband and I loved – nearly to death. We were on a family trip in the spring on the border of Nevada and Utah. A friend was taking care of our big dogs, but we didn't want to leave Rose home for the long weekend. She was so small that she was easy to take everywhere – except into the restaurant where we were having Sunday brunch before we all parted ways and returned to our homes around the Southwest.

It wasn't a particularly warm morning. The van was huge and cool. The windows were open quite a bit. And Rose was very small. Surely it wouldn't warm up enough by the time we finished brunch to get hot in there.

But it did.

When we returned to the van, she was panting heavily. We knew instinctively that she was in trouble. And we were in the middle of nowhere.

Designated Specialty (2013) -- Michele Schmitt

Discussion was held over whether this will be a supported entry with Plum Creek or a designated specialty. We have SCA approval to have a Designated Specialty in February. Are there any AKC/SCA restrictions on holding 3 specialties in a year? If we do a designated we will need to vote on puppy sweepstakes judge at the July meeting due to deadlines.

If we do not have a designated we should do a supported because it is free and we do not need to do trophies if we do not want to. We could also do supported on both days if we want to. A supported entry does not mean we would necessarily have a sweepstakes class. A decision is needed at the July meeting whether we do a Designated or Supported.

Historian/Librarian - Donna Dannon

Donna is still working on getting the resources from Tom.

AKC CAR Donates $6K Helping Displaced Companion Animals During Colorado Wildfires

Colorado Springs, Fort Collins and Boulder Non-Profits Each Received $2,000

AKC Companion Animal Recovery (AKC CAR), working in conjunction with the American Kennel Club and its affiliated clubs in Colorado, has donated $6,000 from its Canine Support and Relief Fund to three non-profits caring for pets displaced as a result of the tragic wildfires in the state.

Each organization received a $2,000 donation to help them in their efforts to care for the hundreds of animals that had to be evacuated due to the High Park Fire in Fort Collins, the Flagstaff Fire near Boulder and the Waldo Canyon Fire in Colorado Springs. With hundreds of homes destroyed and tens of thousands of people evacuated across the state, thousands of pets have been forced to evacuate with their owners, many times not being able to stay with them at temporary housing and in need of their own shelters.

"AKC CAR always stands ready to help displaced pets in times of natural disaster. We are grateful for the dedication of the staff and volunteers at the local humane societies that have contributed to help care for the pets that have been recently evacuated," said Tom Sharp, AKC Companion Animal Recovery CEO. "We are also grateful to the members of the Greeley Kennel Club and the Colorado Springs Kennel Club for their assistance in AKC CAR's disaster relief outreach."

Disaster Relief Donations Awarded To:

- The Larimer Humane Society received $2,000 donation to help house and care for more than 600 animals since the wildfires began.
- The Humane Society of Boulder Valley received a $2,000 donation to help defray costs of caring for evacuated animals and transporting staff to other regions to assist with caring for displaced animals.
- The Humane Society of the Pikes Peak Region received a $2,000 donation to help care for more than 450 animals at two shelter locations.

In addition to disaster relief, AKC CAR's Canine Support and Relief Fund awards annual grants in disaster preparedness and to volunteer K-9 Search and Rescue (SAR) teams. Just last month, grants worth a total of $258,000 were awarded nationwide, including several to groups in Colorado:

- The Human Society of Boulder Valley, Boulder, CO received a disaster preparedness grant of $5,000 to purchase items to supply their Emergency Cache trailers including crates, bowls, gloves, collars, large water and food storage containers, fan, power cords, zip ties, chairs, trash bags, cleaning supplies, various tools for set up, and a canopy for shade.
- The Colorado Veterinary Medical Foundation received a disaster preparedness grant of $3,000, which will be presented locally by the Colorado Kennel Club.
- The SAR Dogs of the US, Otis, CO received a $2,000 SAR grant.

- The La Plata County SAR, Inc. K9 Team, Durango, CO received a $2,000 SAR grant.

Since 2002, AKC CAR has proudly supported the crucial role these volunteers play during natural disasters and other emergencies when the unique talents of a highly trained canine and his handler can often mean the difference between life and death for a missing individual.

Created in the wake of the 9/11 terrorist attacks to honor the work of the search and rescue K-9s who bravely served, the AKC CAR Canine Support and Relief Fund is a permanent charitable fund that has donated more than $4 million to SAR teams and to organizations supporting companion animal relief during natural disasters. ## Save a Dog from Heatstroke - Here's How

So, we took her onto some grass in the shade of a tree, poured water over her to soak her coat and put a wet T-shirt on her. One veterinarian practiced in the tiny town with the big hotel where we were staying. We couldn't reach him, but we found a vet in a distant town and immediately sped there. Fortunately for Rose and us, the vet was able to save her. And we learned our lesson. We were very, very lucky.

As it turns out, we did the right thing without even knowing it. We had what we needed handy to cool her down, though we didn't waste time getting her professional help either.

That's exactly what Ann Hohenhaus, D.V.M., DACVIM, of the Animal Medical Center in New York, recommends: If you have refrigerated water handy, pour it over your dog, completely soak a towel in water, put your dog in the backseat covered with the wet towel and get to the veterinary clinic. But don't waste time trying to find cold water or ice if it's not readily available, she says. Just get the dog to a veterinarian immediately. "Don't spend an hour trying to cool down the dog," she says.

It's not just car incidents like ours that can lead to heatstroke. Brachycephalic breeds experience it if they do too much exercise that they're unaccustomed to. Any dog exercised in hot, especially hot and humid, weather is at risk. A dog confined to a run or kennel near areas of sun-exposed concrete or blacktop can overheat. Even when in the shade, if the temperature is just too high, a dog can get heatstroke. Dogs with any health condition that impairs normal breathing can suffer it too.

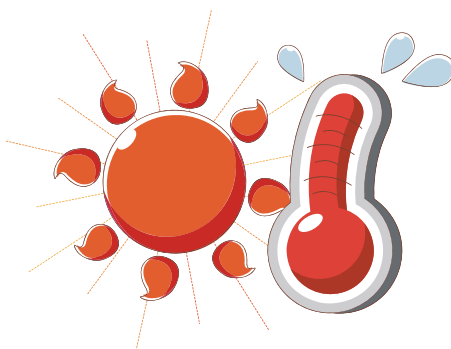

Also, it's important to remember that just because you might be able to tolerate 98 degrees in the shade with a cool drink in hand, it doesn't mean your dogs can. You can sweat – like crazy if you need to. You also can tell when it's getting to be too much and leave the event if need be, go into an air-conditioned building on the grounds, or even drive around in your car with the air conditioning on full blast. Your dogs can do none of those things, except sweat a tiny bit through their paws. And pant. And pant. And pant.

"Don't leave your dog anywhere you wouldn't leave Grandma on a hot day," Hohenhaus says. "If you think about it in those terms, Grandma is not as able to take care of herself as well as you and I are. Dogs can't turn the AC on. We have to think ahead for them."

You never know when you might need to respond to a dog with heatstroke. You may be watching a neighbors' dogs, visiting in a climate unlike your own, just walking down the street on a summer day or end up in a situation you simply weren't expecting.

If you have or see a dog that's panting heavily, and has "ropey" saliva and purple or gray gums, it's very likely heatstroke. Hohenhaus says a dog that also can't stand or move around is in serious trouble.

"Veterinary clinics have efficient ways to cool down dogs, and the sooner the dog gets to the clinic, the better the potential outcome. "Once they cross the line, it's over," Hohenhaus says. "We had a couple die last week."

To be ready just in case one of your dogs or someone else's gets into trouble while traveling, or at a dog show or performance event, add to your cell-phone contact list the telephone number of a 24-hour emergency veterinary clinic at your destination and, if on a daylong drive, between your day's starting and ending points. Hohenhaus also says OnStar is a good way to find an emergency vet while on the road. If you're not alone, you can also ask your passenger to locate and call one with a smart phone.

Also before you leave home, pack into your vehicle two bath towels big enough to cover your dog and enough refrigerated water to pour over a small dog (standing in your ice chest, Hohenhaus suggests) or to soak the towels.

You don't have to worry about your dog getting too cold, she says. That can happen in veterinary clinics, but only because they're prepared for all kinds of overheated dog emergencies, including spiking fevers. But using cold water, even ice packs beneath your dog, while you drive to a clinic, won't harm a dog with heatstroke, she says.

If a dog is merely panting heavily and seems overheated, but can still drink and move around, you're probably safe cooling it down on your own.

But if the dog has gray or purple lips, or can't drink and stand on its own, Hohenhaus advises proceeding immediately to a clinic. Heatstroke can lead to seizures, coma and death. Only a veterinarian will be able to tell you when the dog has recovered.
